

Portuguese Embassy.
11. Belgrave Square.
London. SW1X 8PP

It is with great pleasure, as the President of the Anglo-Portuguese Society, that I welcome you to our website.

Founded in 1938, the Society, a registered charity, promotes cultural relations between our two great nations, organising a wide range of annual events aimed at all ages. The activities of the Anglo-Portuguese Society include art, music, literature, architecture and history.

There are numerous ties between our countries - political, commercial and cultural - with the first formal alliance, known as the Treaty of Windsor, signed in 1386. It established the oldest diplomatic alliance in the world and developed during the past 600 years, providing an exciting source of material from which to draw stimulating connections. Each year the Society stages fascinating talks, exhibitions and social gatherings and constantly strives to encourage new and young talent.

Therefore, I strongly commend the Society and this website to you.

António Santana Carlos
Ambassador of Portugal

October 2008